CLOSING IN ON VILLA

Advices Received at El Paso Indicate
American and Carranza Forces
Have Surrounded Fugitives at El Oso.[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Douglas, Ariz., March 24.—General
Calle, military governor of Sonora,
received a telegram today from General Enriquez, military governor of Chihuahua, stating five columns of Carranza troops were closing in on Villa
and his bandits near Namiquipa, and that with the aid of the Americans, it was believed that Villa would not be able to escape.Governor Enriquez telegraphed that reports concerning the revolt of Herrera were false and was an effort by the radicals to cause trouble between the Carranza government and the United States.Washington, March 24.—Major General Pershing said this telegram to the war department.General Herrera in a telegram to General Gaviña, strongly denied all reports that he had gone over to Villa.
General Gaviña, military governor of Chihuahua, in a letter to Gaviña, also strongly denies that Herrera has gone
over to Villa.Carranza Troops at Border?
According to reports the passing of Carranza troops on the border continue to march here today.American consuls in northern Mexico said they found no massing of troops in northern Mexico.
Senator Ashurst of Arizona, however, received today from D. A. Richardson of Douglas a telegram saying a Mexican general with 3,000 cavalry
and 100 pieces of artillery had arrived at a point over the border, but more than ten blocks from the center of the city, and 7,000 additional Carranza cavalry were six miles south of the border. Richardson telegraphed that American consuls at Douglas
were inadequate and there were fears of an attack.Senator Ashurst said he knew Richardson and regarded his information
as correct.Quiet in Interior.
State department advices from Durango, San Luis Potosi, Nogales, and other points reported quiet. Americans in the interior are reported to be there was no anti-American outbreak.
The navy department had no reports from Tampico, despite efforts to reach the battleship Kentucky by radio.Border agents have been instructed to watch ammunition shipped into Mexico with care.No Troops Near Douglas.
Douglas, Ariz., March 24.—General
P. L. Calle, military governor of Sonora, today again denied reports
that a large number of Mexican troops
had reached Agua Prieta, opposite Douglas, from the south. Investigation did not reveal increased number of troops in Agua Prieta.Douglas passed its quietest night in two weeks last night. Over in Agua Prieta, General Calle spent the evening playing whist with the family.

Letter Reports Herrera Loyal.

Washington, March 24.—American consul at Chihuahua, today reported there was no truth in the reported revolt of General Herrera and the Carranza Garrison at Chihuahua.
Although General Pershing and General Bell on the border have received reports concerning the story of the revolt which they believed to be true,
the dispatch from Letcher, who was on the ground and has headquarters
in the place where the revolt was said
to have occurred, is a contradictory
nature that it was impossible to separate the true from the false.Early today Andres Garcia, the Carranza consul here, displayed telegrams which he said he received from General Herrera, in which he announced that Villa was surrounded at El Oso, a ranch five miles south of Namiquipa, by the joint American and Carranza troops, and a decisive battle was imminent.There was frank skepticism among other United States army officers, although it was admitted advanced developments of American troops might be reached Namiquipa by the time it if they maintained anything
the speed with which they made
the first hundred miles of their march.
Believe Villa Located.Fort Bliss and in other well informed circles, the report that Villa
had been definitely located at El Oso, was generally credited. It was pointed out, however, that this did not necessarily indicate the bandit's early capture as the character of the country
would aid him in escaping, if he wished to break up his command and avoid military engagement.

UNCLE SAM'S FIGHTING MEN ON HEELS OF BANDIT VILLA

U. S. cavalry on march in Mexico; in camp.

Further and further southward, across the arid wastes of northern Mexico, the long arm of Uncle Sam is reaching after Villa, bandit. A flying squadron of cavalry, riding light and fast in advance, a long line of infantry tramping through the stifling desert dust which rises and swirls above them in choking clouds, the clash and rumble of artillery—so the column works its way toward the grim distant peaks of the Sierra Madre, the place of the quarry.

from Casas Grandes. If this report is true, officers there say, the chances for capturing Villa or running him to a point where he must make his last fight, are increased.Campaign of Location.
Until now the operations have been possible more than a campaign of location. Three cavalry detachments have been working southward along widely separated trails, and the opportunity for direct chase is now offered. It was indicated by staff officers who have followed the details of the pursuit.Here it was not believed that the Americans would allow Villa to get out of their sight again, and his capture or death appeared more likely to fall than any other time. General Pershing, it was believed, would concentrate as many of his men as possible in the pursuing force, relieving
those who have been riding the country south of Casas Grandes.Resort to Pack Mules.
Columbus, March 24 (censored).—
The American campaign to capture Francisco Villa has reached the point
in foothills of Chihuahua where it has been found necessary to dispense with heavy motor trucks as transport facilities and to depend entirely upon the array pack mule it was learned today.
Lieutenant J. L. Parkinson, who arrived here today, reported all of the American trucks and drivers had been accounted for, and American troops have not clashed with any Mexican force since crossing the border.AWAITS EXECUTION

The various committees of the Commercial club having this work in charge held an interesting meeting on Thursday at the Grand Hotel and again this noon at the Myers Hotel, at which time the work was all mapped out for a whirlwind campaign.At the Thursday meeting the question of labor conditions was taken up
in detail and several manufacturers employing women and girls were invited to express their views on the question of there being a sufficient supply to meet all the demands that might be made upon it by the addition of a new factory. The pros and cons of the question were thoroughly discussed and it was decided by a unanimous vote of the committee and the directors of the Commercial club to go ahead with the proposition.At the meeting this noon all prospects were listed and assigned to the various committees, and while active work will commence this afternoon
the campaign in truth will not be on until Monday, when a whirlwind cam-

TO GET INSTRUCTIONStudy of Current Events Arranged
Following "Bad Break" on Part of Employee in Donald's
Office.[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]
Madison, Wis., March 24.—Plans are being made to conduct a class to study
"current events" among the capital
employees of the state. The movement was started at a recent meeting of the Capitol club, addressed by John A.
Hazelwood, secretary of the state
civil service commission, and by Dr.
Charles McCarthy, head of the legislative reference library.
Rev. George Brown, a clerk to the 1913 legislature, and since that time
election clerk in the office of Secretary of State John S. Donald, will probably be one of the leaders. Brown is convinced. Early in the week one of Brown's letters sent out officially was published in Washington. In reply to a letter from an official in Washington for information as to the senatorial election in Wisconsin, Brown answered that "there will be no
senatorial election in Wisconsin
this year." Official Washington wondered what was going to happen to Wisconsin. Election Clerk Brown has just discovered that a successor to Robert M. La Follette is to be elected this year. He is now one of the leaders for the establishment of a class to study the newspapers and "current events."UNION GROVE HAS SERIOUS FIRE LOSSEntire West Side of Racine County
Village is Destroyed by Flames
This Morning.[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Racine, March 24.—Fire which started in the hardware store of Edward Swartz, at Union Grove, at an early hour today, gained such rapid headway before it was discovered that it was not checked until it destroyed
the entire west side of the village, including business district. The burned
area extends a distance of two blocks
along the main thoroughfare of the town. The loss is estimated between eighty and one hundred thousand dollars. The fire department, led by Fire Marshal Poland and aided by the entire population of the town, made
a desperate fight to check the flames
and it was only after the hardest kind of work that the eastern side of the town was saved.Among the buildings destroyed
were the following: Calendar B. Cooper drug store, Nielson's bowling alley, the publishing plant of Union
Grove Enterprise, edited by G.
Colby; Bulfinch's meat market; hardware store owned by Wm. Murdoch;
law offices of John P. Gittings; Hurd's
clothing store, and barber shop of W.
D. Bixby.The west office of John P. Gittings, among the buildings destroyed, were said to have contained one of the most comprehensive law libraries in the state.Chippewa Falls Loses.
Chippewa Falls, March 24.—A fire
early today of unknown origin, entailing a loss of $160,000, eighty per cent
of which is covered by insurance, destroyed the building and stock of the Chippewa Valley Mercantile company, a wholesale grocery concern. The building occupied quarter of a block and was three stories high. The stock on hand was the biggest the company ever had. Work on a new building of larger proportions will be begun immediately.It was the most destructive fire in the history of the city, burning seven hours.GRIMM ADDS ANOTHER

of Rock county, a county supervisor,
a railroad ticket agent, an automobile
salesman and also an automobile ac-
settled to the satisfaction of all parties concerned through the intervention of Judge George Grimm and attorneys for either side, after the trial
had started this afternoon in circuit court.John A. Henderson, formerly ticket agent at Edgerton, brought action against Sheriff Dell Chamberlain to secure the return of an automobile alleged to have been seized by a deputy under execution. The car was in the possession of Fred P. Carrier, Edgerton, to whom Henderson had commissioned to sell the machine after it had arrived at Edgerton under "shipment" and after Henderson, although it was not consigned to him, had purchased from the makers.The process of Henry Ebbott, county supervisor from Edgerton, in the case involves a judgment awarded him against Carrier for $600. Ebbott secured attachment on the car and Sheriff Chamberlain's deputy seized it upon court order, alleging it had been owned by Carrier and never had owned the car and Henderson did not own the car and never had owned the same.Henderson based his action seeking the return of the car on the allegation
that he had delivered it into Carrier's possession for sale.

Judge Grimm went into conference

wards it was announced that the matter had been settled satisfactorily to

ARE COMMITTED TO
DEFINITE PLATFORMGovernor Points to Principles Endorsed at Madison Convention in Response to Charges.[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]
Madison, Wis., March 24.—An argument which is being used that the delegates to the republican national convention who were nominated at the Madison convention are committed to no set of principles, was answered by Governor Philipp on Thursday.The governor was shown a statement which had been published in a Wisconsin newspaper to the effect that the set of delegates of which he is the head and not taken the people of Wisconsin into their confidence
to the candidate they would favor or the principles they represented."It is common knowledge," said the governor, "that the delegates nominated at the republican state convention held in Madison January 27 are committed to the platform adopted at that convention, which was published in full in many newspapers of this state. If the voters will read that platform they will see that we stand for a protective tariff, for greater economy in the affairs of our national government, for a stronger navy,
for better preparedness for just treatment for all belligerent nations in Europe."Our opponents have only one plank
in their platform and that is La Follette, who stands for free trade
and for no definite policy concerning the other principles advanced. As for candidates for president the La Follette delegates are pledged to the candidate only. That is La Follette, and he is impossible. No delegate who is willing or desires to go to the convention, open minded and for the purpose of doing the best for his party and the country can all this time say who the successful candidate for the republican national convention will be. For my part I would like to vote for Justice Hughes.
However, it is not certain he will accept the nomination should it be given him. Therefore I cannot say that I would not in the end vote for some other candidate if I am elected.
In the end we are obliged to do so."It is my purpose and I think it should be the purpose of every delegate to vote for the best man for president in the convention. The country needs a strong president and every
patriotic man must recognize that."WILL NOT CALL OUT

New York, March 24.—District At-

would arraign Dr. Arthur Warren
Waite for murder of his father-in-law,
John E. Peck, a millionaire druggist of Grand Rapids, Mich., as soon as Waite's physical condition would permit bringing him to court. The young dentist is under arrest at his apart-

effect of narcotics taken Wednesday
and yesterday that the district attorney hoped to produce him in court
today.Investigation of the death of Mr.
and Mrs. John E. Peck in Dr. Waite's Riverside home, under circumstances which lead authorities to believe they were victims of poison, continued today. The grand jury heard further evidence as rapidly as it was made available by a big squad of detectives.The identity of the woman who, according to Dr. Waite's admission to the district attorney, was registered with him at a hotel as Dr. and Mrs.

the authorities.Dr. Waite's prominence as a sports-

TELLS OF CAPTURESGerman Cruiser Captain Who Slipped Past English Fleet Relates
Raiding Experiences.[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Berlin, March 24.—Interesting details of some of the exploits of the German commando raider Moeve have been given by her commander. The day after the capture of the Appam
the Moeve, says the Overseas News agency, in a summary of the commander's reminiscences, the steamer Clan MacTavish was sighted at four thirty in the morning. The MacTavish being fast, it was only after long chase the Moeve was able to get the Moeve to within a few miles of the ship. The Moeve was in a wireless conversation, the Moeve saying
"What ship are you?" The MacTavish being somewhat distrustful answered
"Who are you?""The Moeve replied, 'A German cruiser. Stop immediately.' The MacTavish declares by wireless, 'I have stopped,' but she continued at full speed, the Moeve's commander said. At the time the wireless operator of the MacTavish was using her wireless even after the first warning shot was fired."The Moeve's shell went which exploded on the bridge. The firing went on until after the MacTavish had been hit several times and she said
by wireless 'We have really stopped.'
The Moeve's commander said again,
"It was impossible to learn. Her most clever captain, when I asked him who
she was, gave me a name which was not to be found in any of the shipping registers." The Moeve's commander said, upon which he gave another name. The captain told me
in his confusion he really had forgotten the name of the first ship."It was a matter of utter indifference," added the commander humor-ously, "under what name the ship was sunk. But it was pitiable we should have to sink a steamer with 1,000 cases of champagne on board, as we had not more of the stuff ourselves."ANOTHER SUBMARINE

Berlin, March 24.—Further suc-

the vicinity of Hancourt, northwest of Verdun, army headquarters announced today, two additional trenches having been occupied.On the Russian front the vicious attacks on the German lines in the northern sector have been continued,
both northwest and south of Dvinsk.

ment declares.Slav Drive at Dvinsk.
The importance of the struggle
around Verdun naturally overshadows
interest in the contest on the eastern front, but latest dispatches show hard fighting is in progress on the northern sector of the Russian line.The Russian drive became intense on the evening of March 19.
More than 50,000 shells, chiefly of heavy caliber, fell over a small section of front near Postavy. German wire entanglements and the front line trenches were damaged by this fire.At night the Russians attacked in thick waves. The first two waves were mowed down before they reached the entanglements. The third attack succeeded. German position on a front of less than 100 yards were assaults were ejected by a counter-attack. Led in person by a regimental commander. At dawn, the Russians
made a fourth attack, but it was smothered
in the initial stages by German artillery.Four Russian positions are said to have participated in these movements.
The Germans are completely summa-rion a few reserves. Their losses were heavier than on the two preceding days of the fighting, on account of the Russian drive, but it is asserted that nevertheless they were surprisingly small.Russians Lose Heavily.
Activity of the Russians at other points of the front is less marked. Comparative quiet prevailed on March 19 along the sector between Wiszniew and Narczew Lakes, except for a strong attack of the Russians, which was repulsed.The losses sustained by the Russians in these encounters are said to have been very heavy. Notwithstanding the severity of the actions, no concern is evident here. The state of public feeling was expressed by a correspondent, who said:

"F. J. McMillan, who has been in charge of the big sale in Superior and

Duluth, of C.A.S.K.A., had his troubles

on the last day of the sale while here

Notwithstanding the fact that he

all exhausted by 1:30 in the after-

LUNCHEON A SUCCESS

One Hundred and Fifty Club Women Enjoyed Social Gathering on Thursday at Grand Hotel.

A large crowd, a delicious menu,
and unbounded enthusiasm marked
the luncheon arranged by the club
women at the Grand hotel on Thursday afternoon. The request for tickets had been so large that at least fifty had to be refused for lack of accommodation. It looked to be a casual observer when the ladies were gathered in the parlors and hallways, as though every club woman in town and
"then some" were there. The hotel management put everything in their power to accommodate the unusual number of guests and to contribute to the success of the occasion. A delicious luncheon, faultless service and attractive surroundings helped to make the affair a social success.

After the meal was finished the chairs were arranged in the larger room and the afternoon's program was started. Mrs. J. W. Beoworth, as chairman of the occasion, introduced the guests of honor, Mrs. R. T. Murdock, and Mrs. T. D. Woolsey of Beloit.
The former lady is president of the City Federation and she gave some of the experiences of that organization in the line of civic betterment. She spoke of the federation, starting with only a few members
until at the present time they numbered something over three hundred.
The federation had assisted the beginnings of the local library movement,
of the school rooms, and had been the means of introducing kindergartens, the manual training and domestic science
work into the regular school curriculum. Their latest venture and the one upon which they have concentrated all their efforts for two years has been Beloit Center—their down town rest center. Mrs. Murdock told of the various plans that had been made to meet
the financial part of the undertaking.
During the last year the federation beside several small projects, had held a rummage sale and a society picnic. The latter attraction being quite a social success, having over 250 persons in the play. She closed with a plea for good fellowship and co-operation.

Mrs. Woolsey, as chairman of the rooms committee, gave a stirring talk on the live work being done in Beloit Center. She spoke of the general use of the room by country people and city folk alike, and that on a recent Saturday they had listed over seven hundred visitors to the room. The matron had been given the powers of a policeman by the city and had been able to assist young girls with advice and in other ways. Clubs from the surrounding country districts
came in at various times and conducted food sales which were very popular. The dues to the city federation are only twenty-five cents and beside that each club interested is expected to hold at least one social during the year to help out the funds of the federation. The moving picture theaters co-operate with the work and are always glad to have the women take hold of the social work. Mrs. Woolsey said that "life was one great compromise,"
and that women working together
should sink individual prejudices and consider what was best for all. She proposed a plan for a board of directors, which might take permanent
charge of the club room movement.

Miss Mabel Shumway of the Women's History Class, gave an estimate of the cost of the proposed club room
which had been able to have made. She said that the plan called for finishing the space into two club rooms with folding glass doors between and extra windows in the south wall, and with the walls tinted.

HALL & HUEBEL

Clear as a Bell

I claim for the SONORA a tone quality that stands without comparison in purity, sweetness, and richness. A tone of warmth and beauty is produced that is really and truly human-like. It would be useless for me to make the above statements unless the machine would back it up, so we call on the Sonora to speak for itself, and ask you to be the judge. After listening to some of the latest records, Sonora plays all records, Edison, Columbia, Victor, Crescent, McKinley, Pathe and any other disc record on the market.

You certainly would enjoy the Sonora in your home, as an entertainer there is nothing that will surpass it. From an educational standpoint it is used in schools, kindergarten, all of the grades, high school, colleges, churches; even hospitals, and many other places for entertainment. Let me place one in your home for a demonstration, or you can call at my store. Three new Sonora Phonographs just arrived and more to follow. See that the name SONORA is on the Phonograph before you buy.
At present writing I have as follows:

One Sonora with cabinet, $55.00

One Sonora with cabinet, $75.00

One Sonora with cabinet, $100.00

Other styles will follow now in a few days. In a few days
I am expecting a good supply of Columbia latest records; also several Columbia machines. Columbia records and machines are first-class, and well known all over the world.

A RADICAL CHANGE IN BRITISH LABOR

Swift Transformation in Industrial System of England With Women Taking Active Part.

London, March 24.—Hardly less remarkable than the swift transformation of England into a powerful military nation has been the upheaval that has placed the civil work and the industry of the workshops in the hands of women. It has been estimated from official figures that there were fully 2,000,000 more women in active employ on March 1, 1916, than the corresponding day twelve months earlier. However, the number is increasing week by week.

Every class of women, including those previously regarded as leisure and well-to-do, are adding to the total. The call is reaching the remotest hamlets as well as the quiet market towns, and the women and girls are responding. The women are mobilized in a great army all ready to serve wherever they are most needed—even to the hard labor of the tilling of the soil.

Such changes in the national, commercial and industrial spheres are rapidly creating considerable readjustment of social conditions with the result that the Young Women's Christian Association, Women's suffrage organizations and other agencies of women's clubs are confronted with many new problems in helping to care for the thousands of women suddenly thrown into a new environment.

The initial difficulty to be dealt with has been that of housing the workers in the munition factories. All sorts of factories have been established in the provincial towns and all down the country, calling for large drafts of workers from outside. Buildings have been hard to find, and, of course, following all law of supply and demand, have been costly, even if they could be found at all. Railway communications with places at any distance have been unsatisfactory, especially for those on the night shifts. Only in the larger centers of population has the service of train car or omnibuses been of any help to those living at a distance.

Thousands of thousands of young women and girls were suddenly shifted from their familiar surroundings in the larger cities to the new life in the country where many of the huge munition factories have been erected. The manufacture of high explosives is not permitted in the vicinity of homes. Therefore cautions had to be established close to such works so that the women would not have to go long distances for their meals, and relieve them of much fatigue and strain.

Perhaps the ideal conditions have been reached by one famous firm engaged in the manufacture of cordite. A colony for the workers was erected in a long series of wooden huts, each containing some twenty-two beds. In the center of all is a dining hall with a perfectly equipped kitchen, a recreation room, and a small model hospital. As soon as these plans had been approved the firm had one of the women's organizations take up the responsibility for them in behalf of the girls employed.

Public indignation is more stirred at the idea of women's labor in shell, fuse and explosive making than it is over the vast army engaged in the more humdrum round of business routine. But the fact is that the woman who is forced to work in the offices of the government, municipalities, banks, factories and stores is much worse off than her sister in the munition works. She receives less pay and very little attention is paid to her welfare. But she is sustaining the fabric of the state to no less extent.

JOE THE BOOK FARMER MAKING GOOD ON THE LAND

By
GARRARD HARRIS

COPYRIGHT, 1915,
BY HARRIS & BROTHERS.

"Plenty of time yet," said Joe easily.

"Let's go and look at the stock."

They walked back to the stock exhibit down by the race track, a considerable distance from the Agricultural hall. They were immersed in admiring the beauties of fat, splendid cattle on exhibition when Mr. Ralston pulled his watch from his pocket again.

"Great gracious, Joe, the entries will close in five minutes! You've got just about time to make it there. Run! Hurry up!" he urged.

"I'm not going to enter," said Joe quietly.

"W-h-a-t! Not going to enter?" gasped his father.

"No, sir; I ain't." He said it determinedly.

"Oh, son, don't act foolish. Don't throw away a sure thing like that!"

"Go on, Joe. You've worked too hard for this. Go in and win!" said Tom Ralston.

"I ain't going to do it," replied Joe doggedly. "If I took the prize away from that poor boy taking care of boy, can sell that scholarship I will give you $500 cash for it."

"You've sure bought it!" said the man. "Come on up to the office of the fair management and we'll trade right now!" He did not even wait for his hat.

On arrival there the management confirmed the fact that the scholarship was the property of Henry and could be sold or used as he pleased. The county superintendent showed a boyish scrawl of a note authorizing him to act for Henry.

"He couldn't spare the time to come up here," he said.

Mr. Ralston laid down five $100 bills, took the transfer of ownership and the scholarship certificate and a receipt.

"But—I don't understand why you are doing this, and for whom is it?" queried the superintendent.

For answer Mr. Ralston tossed over to him the record he had borrowed from Joe Weston. The man glanced at it, and the color left his face a moment.

"Why—why—er—he is really entitled to the prize!" he whispered apprehensively.

"He would have been—if he had entered," corrected Mr. Ralston.

"But—why didn't he enter. Too late?" said the man.

"No—too big," said Mr. Ralston.

"I don't just understand"—puzzled the superintendent.

"We heard you talking down at the hotel today at dinner," said Mr. Ralston. "We were at the table behind you. And Joe was just too big and too fine to take it away from a chap that has had less of a chance than he has."

"And who are you?" asked the wondering schoolteacher, with a great respect in his voice and manner.

"I'm just a 'rich Yankee,' as you folks down here call us, that likes to do a bit of good once in a while with some of his money," smiled Mr. Ralston, as he left the office.

He found Joe and Tom looking at the Corn club entries.

"Where you been?" inquired Mr. Weston. "We got lost from you."

"Oh, I've been rambling around some on my own hook," he answered, smilingly.

"Well, I beat 'em out again on the best twelve ears—got $40 as a prize for that, anyway!" said Joe jubilantly, as he pointed to the blue ribbon on his corn and a card placed thereon with his name as winner.

"Want to sell it? I'll give you $3 an ear for it!" queried an enterprising seedsmen, bustling up.

"You certainly have bought twelve ears of corn," said Joe. "Where's the money?"

"Here!" said the man, counting it out. Joe wrote a receipt and an order for the twelve ears to be delivered to him.

"A hundred and one dollars for twelve ears of corn is a sort of a record breaker itself!" said Joe. "County prize, $25; state prize, $40, and $3 an ear for the corn."

"You bet it's a record," said Tom Ralston.

"Come on, let's go to this eating place and get supper before the crowd rushes in. I'm used to eatin' early," said Mr. Weston.

When the party were seated and the waitress had gone for their order Mr. Ralston looked at Joe intently.

"Got any regrets about losing that scholarship, Joe?" he inquired.

"Not a one, sir; I'd do it again in a minute if I had the chance!" answered Joe sturdily. "Just think how much it means to those folks, to that boy! Well, they've got their chance now—like I had."

"You've still got yours," said the manufacturer. "I think, Joe, the work you are doing is a good influence in the county and in the state. It has been a help to me, and it is making a fine chap out of Tom."

"Oh, yes; I'm going ahead, but it's going to put off my trip a couple of years. I'll have to wait that long to learn some of the fine points of farming—that's all."

"No, it is not going to put it off one day, Joe—not one day. Here's your scholarship, take it as a slight token of the appreciation of one who would do more for you gladly if there was any way to do it!" Mr. Ralston handed over the certificate.

"Ho-ho-ho! goodness! Is it really so?" inquired Mr. Weston rising out of his seat.

"It sure is, pa; and I thank you, Mr. Ralston, from the bottom of my heart. Will the poor boy get the money all right?"

"The full price, Joe—$500. I did not want you to think you had taken advantage of him for a penny. He got $200 more than they expected."

"Well, we'll study hard, won't we, Tom, and try and show we are worth it?" said Joe happily.

"We'll give a good account of ourselves," asserted his chum.

"And, say, I do hope this won't get in the papers and make that poor boy feel that he really didn't win, after all—that it was a sort of a charity scheme, you know?" said Joe earnestly.

"The way a thing comes to a person has a heap to do with the enjoyment."

"I've fixed that," said Mr. Ralston. "It was part of the trade with the superintendent that he would keep his mouth shut, and we won't do any talking, either."

"My, my, but this has turned out fine! Won't mother and Annie be glad?" asked Joe Weston happily.

THE END.

BANKERS-FARMERS MEETING
AT MADISON NEXT WEEK

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)

Madison, Wis., March 24.—Bankers from all sections of Wisconsin will come here next week for a two days' conference over what is called the "Banker-Farmer excursion."

The meeting is expected to bring to the agricultural college about three hundred farmers and two hundred bankers. A series of addresses has been arranged by the college of agriculture. The principal address of the meeting will be made on Tuesday, March 27, by B. F. Harris, president of the First National Bank of Champaign, Ill., and chairman of the agricultural committee of the American Bankers.

"That is correct, yes, sir."

"I'll give you $500 for it."

The man gasped and stared at him as though he did not comprehend.

"I mean it; I'm not joking. If you

lars were brought from the Casula and Liverpool camps.

In the early evening the rioters stormed the German club. Although that institution was closed by the authorities some time ago, the men wantonly stoned it, and broke into many other buildings. A large number of arrests were made. Finally a party of strikers attacked a number of soldier pickets stationed at the Central railway station. The rioters were first to fire, using their revolvers, and the pickets returned with rifles. As a result of this clash a cavalryman from Queensland was killed and eight of the rioters seriously wounded.

During the night the regular soldiers succeeded in getting the rioters back to their respective camps, having arrested the ringleaders. Some of the latter were dealt with leniently with short jail sentences, but the principal ones were taken in hand by the military authorities for court martial.

Keen regret was felt in Sydney and all over Australia because of the untimely conduct of the recruits. Apprehension was felt lest the reports of the trouble should be exaggerated abroad, and for a time the conscription prevented any account of the occurrences.

AUSTRALIAN STRIKE WAS A REAL MUTINY

Recent Riot Among Soldiers Caused by Order for More Drilling.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Sydney, Australia, March 24.—A recent riot at Sydney in which some 15,000 soldiers were involved can be called by no other name than "mutiny" in the official view of Senator Pearce, the minister for defense, who expressed his belief that this order among the Australian recruits has been inspired by "enemy gold and influence."

Newspapers in Sydney and elsewhere, however, attributed the outbreak to long continued failure by the defense department to see that wartime discipline is maintained at the training camps.

(Some details of the riots at Sydney have already been learned through the arrival of steamships at San Francisco, but the following elaborates and confirms previous advice.)

The troops involved in the mutiny were from the training camps at Casula and Liverpool, near this city. The trouble was due primarily to an order from the inspector-general, the Hon. Mr. McCall, increasing the number of hours of weekly drill from thirty-six to forty and one-half. This order was issued from headquarters at Melbourne and was immediately received with poor grace by the recruits at the two big training camps. The order was to go into effect on the morning of February 14. On that morning 5,000 men marched out of the Casula camp, which is about twenty-five miles from Sydney, on what they called a "strike." It is assumed that the military guard at the camp was not strong enough to offer resistance.

In any case the Casula men marched to the nearby Liverpool camp and induced about 10,000 men to join in the "strike." Although a considerable number of recruits at both camps refused to join in the mutinous proceedings, the leaders of the "strike" were followed by a big majority of all the recruits.

The first trouble occurred in the town of Liverpool where, before noon, large bodies of soldiers had wrecked two saloons, drunk much liquor, and taken practical possession of the place. The trains running from Liverpool to Sydney were seized by the soldiers, and they swarmed into Sydney during the rest of the day. The men at first contented themselves with parading in military formation, but later they began to "rush" railway cars, commit petty looting, and frightening women and children. By evening the situation had become serious for the majority of the men had become intoxicated. The city police were called out to their maximum strength in both foot and mounted men and attempted to enforce special order for the closing of saloons. The police were unable to deal with this situation, however, and armed regu-

Now we have discovered the secret of uniform goodness always. We have found that the blending of even the finest and choicest coffees is not sufficient. We have found that the size of the coffee bean is not a test of true coffee quality.

We have found, and thousands of users are demonstrating that in addition to the selection of the world's fine coffees and their proper proportioning, each individual coffee bean must be weighed.

Two coffee beans may be of the same size—one will be heavy, with the rich, savory aromatic oils which give flavor and body—and the other light in weight—mere woody fiber, bitter, poor and defective.

Such light beans ruin rich coffee flavor. Such beans cannot be taken out by any mere screening process, and frequently one-fifth or more of the beans of a given size will be thus deficient in weight—sheer waste and shells.

Now, of course, Hall's Prosperity Coffee is, first of all, a perfectly proportioned blend of the choicest beans the markets afford. We import thousands of bags of coffee famed for certain properties—one for aroma, another for body, one for this element, another for that.

But we do not stop with this correct blending. Now, Hall's Prosperity Coffee is gravity graded. By a wonderful new process, every bean is actually weighed in a marvelous pneumatic machine which automatically selects the heaviest, richest beans and throws out the rest.

This wonderful machine will sort the bag of coffee into as many as fifteen different lots, each graded by the weight of the beans of which it is composed. The richest, heaviest beans we retain for Hall's Prosperity Coffee; the balance

Madam—Try This Fine Coffee Once

WE announce today the coming to your city of a new and better coffee.

No, madam, this is not just another new brand. It is the one coffee for which you have been perhaps anxiously waiting—a better coffee, and mark you, at no greater cost.

We ask you to just try this new coffee, which we have called PROSPERITY—upon our statement and the statements of the grocers of your city, whose names you will find below, that it is superior in its superb flavor, freshness and cleanliness to any other coffee you can buy, no matter what the price.

You know good coffee—the gentlemen whose names appear below this advertisement selling Prosperity Coffee in your city know coffee—and so we say let, please, an actual trial of the coffee itself decide the matter.

After all, coffee, you know, is a flavor.

The trouble has been, that heretofore there was no way in which the flavor and body of coffee could be determined in advance except by guesswork.

The public and coffee roasters alike have been educated to believe, quite erroneously, that the grade of the coffee is determined by the size of the bean. Thus a coffee blender took a little of this and a little of that coffee, mixed them, and ran them through a screen with a certain size mesh. All the coffee which fell through the screen was considered one grade, and all that remained, another.

The large sized bean was thought high grade—the smaller bean a lower grade. Thus it was by this hit or miss method that all we got was coffee of the regular size. Uniform quality was impossible by such rule of thumb process, so sometimes your coffee pleased you, oftentimes not.

Hall's Gravity-Graded

Prosperity Coffee

We dispose of to those who require a lesser quality—made where our name is not used. No other process in the world can produce such coffee as this.

No other coffee has, or can have, the full, rich body, the marvelous aroma and the flavor of Hall's Prosperity Coffee.

Won't you try it and find out? That is all we ask.

It's promise you a coffee revelation.

Hall's Prosperity Coffee is sold at 25c, 30c and 35c in one-lb. sealed packages. It comes to your dealer fresher than other coffee he has been able to sell you. The difference in these prices is simply the difference in the proportion of high grade coffees used in the blending. There is no difference in the process—each is gravity graded, each contains the richest beans of the coffees used.

Start a Savings Bank Account. On every package of Hall's Prosperity Coffee is printed a free savings bank coupon. By a special arrangement with one of the well-known banks in your community, we give a new savings account of $100.00 to the first person who saves a bank book to return for ten of these free coupons with 30 cents. After that more coupons will entitle you to more money.

To be added to your savings account, without any cash payment whatever. Our new plan is fully explained on each package of Hall's Prosperity Coffee.

to make liberal contributions. Janesville can well afford to endorse a "going concern" rather than put its money up against a possibility, and the Gossard concern is of known value and its other branch factories have been of value to the community in which they are established. Let everyone get under the proposition and bring it to a successful issue.

THE WEATHER VANE.

Political straws still continue to point to increasing republican sentiment throughout the country. The first state-wide primaries ever held in Indiana showed a remarkably strong republican vote with a much smaller democratic vote, and that of the progressives approaching the vanishing point. In Iowa a municipal election at Muscatine resulted in a republican landslide, all the democrats in office being replaced by republicans. In Maine the election in cities resulted in republican victories, and the unsealing of democrats.

On April 4th, election day, vote for the unincorporated republican delegation to the national republican convention. E. L. Philipp, C. K. Ellingson, Emil Baensch and S. A. Cook as delegates at large and George Ingerson and Storm as district delegates. They are republicans chosen at a republican state convention.

All this trouble in Mexico is due to the fact that the warriors of that country have discontinued the useful and patriotic task of killing each other and have transferred their activities elsewhere.

Here's hoping that there will be no delay in the capture of Villa. It was not necessary to give him thirty days' notice and three insertions in the county paper before getting after him.

Those fifty cars of canned salmon that have just started from the Pacific coast will be the cause of right out of the river by the time they reach the boarding house table.

In spite of the fact that he is thoroughly disapproved of by Colonel Roosevelt, President Wilson, after mature deliberation, has decided not to resign.

Some people's idea of macerating the flesh during Lent is saving it from the dances in order to have an equally good time at the theaters.

The German guns can undoubtedly batter down anything on earth, but unfortunately the French soldiers refuse to stand still and be shot at.

Newspaper enterprise is a mighty good thing within reason, but just now along the border, the principal beneficiary seems to be Francisco Villa.

A cheap and very desirable way to increase our naval strength will be for the German fleet to come out of Kiel canal and fight the English.

There is a widespread feeling among the milliners that they should have been consulted before Easter was appointed for so late a date.

The bustle is in style now, and is much seen in military quarters.

On the Spur of the Moment
ROY K. MOULTON

The Annual Massacre. Just about this time, each year, the weather does the same old thing.

It rains in its frigid might. And kills the peaches over night. The pessimists arise to howl. And curse the climate good and growl.

The outlook's always mighty bad. And each fall is the worst we've had.

There's not a pear tree or a plum That has not been put on the bum. If this thing don't happen, it's a wonder. It would not seem like old times a bit.

The grape crop's noted to its bier. Fifteen or sixteen times a year. But still enough of it escapes. To keep well supplied with grapes.

The oldest man cannot recall A single glad some spring when all The fruit trees were not somehow chilled.

And all next summer's prospects killed. But, following this sad refrain, The fruit crop's always born again. For, after the last rites are said, The stubborn thing just won't stay dead.

Oh! Those Women! A young man in the country had a tender passion and took a girl some flowers. "How kind of you," said the girl, "to bring me these lovely flowers. They are so beautiful and fresh. I think there is some dew on them yet." "Yes," said the young man in great embarrassment, "there is, but I'm going to pay it off tomorrow."

Mrs. Newlywed called at the meat:

market the other morning and asked the butcher if he had any nice slumps. "Slumps? What are they?" asked the butcher. "Indeed, I don't know; but my husband is always talking about a slump in the market, so I thought I'd take one."

Watchful Waiting. On a certain street in this good old town dwells a perfectly lovely young lady, says the Rich Hill (Mo.) Enterprise. On another street lives an industrious young man of excellent character, while in still another section there abides a consecrated minister of the gospel, who is ever ready to do all the good he can and make happy all the people he can. Let us watch, wait and listen and see if something happens soon in which all three take part. None of our business.

Prosperity. It sometimes seems a feller's got de very meenest sort of life and it is really not what it's cracked up to be; But when he comes to figger out what he has been a-killin' bout he finds dat many fellers must be usin' de wuss of dan he.

It sometimes seems dat things break bad and den a feller, he gets mad, when he ought to be down-right glad dat dey ain't any wuss. Whenever you said an' done, Ah has a quite a bit of fun in life an' dat's no idle pun. Ah mus' remember dat.

By usin' quite a bit of stealth, Ah've managed to bank back my wealth an' not be very fat. Prosperity may come some day, an' though you bank back, you'll thrive. Dat much you mus' allow.

Here's a Cheerful Old Party. A Sunfield citizen, who remembers when he was a boy, says as well as though it was yesterday, says in 1810 the winter was much the same as this season, and that the summer following was the hottest on record.

In May the ice formed a half-inch thick on ponds, frost and ice were common in June. All summer long the wind blew steadily from the north and the warm days did not come. Mothers knit socks double thickness for their children and made thick mittens and the folks ate buckwheat cakes for breakfast the whole year through. There is enough optimism in our make-up to prevent us from getting downhearted over the outlook. The only inclination is to shed a sympathetic tear for what happened to the folks who lived in 1810.

BONES NOT BROKEN BUT BRAKEMAN'S FOOT SUFFERS BAD WRENCH

John Barry, 1315 Pleasant street, Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railway switchman, injured Wednesday afternoon when his foot was wrenched between a tie and the foot-board of his engine is suffering extreme pain. X-ray photographs of the injured member have determined that no bones were broken. His injury is a badly wrenched foot and ankle. Mr. Barry was injured about a year ago when he was knocked from the roof of a box car and previous to this has been in several accidents where his escape was miraculous.

TWO SCHOOL TEAMS

MEET AT Y. M. C. A.

Washington and Adams Grade School Will Meet at "Y" in Basketball Game Tonight—Girl Teams Play.

Both the Washington and Adams school basketball teams, winners of the grade school basketball league which was held at the Young Men's Christian association this winter, are set for the exhibition game which will be staged at the "Y" this evening. The two teams have been at practice for the past few weeks and the rivalry that exists between these two boys teams will make a very interesting struggle for the spectators tonight.

The regular lineups will be in for both sides as follows: Washington, Roy Keller, Leo Powers, Frank Wilcox, Max Munson, and Arthur O'Donnell; Adams, George Rasmussen, John Ford, Bernard McLaughlin, Lovell Black and Lohrere Tunstead.

Immediately after the game Superintendent H. C. Buell of the public schools will present two silver cups to the teams. The Washington team will receive the one for the championship of the city schools and the Adams one for second place, as they won the honors in the second league.

Both cups were obtained from the proceeds gained by selling season tickets to the games.

The girls teams from the Methodist and Congregational churches will play a preliminary game tonight before the boys' contest. Mr. Beck from the high school will referee both contests.

The grade school basketball league has proved so big a success that plans are now being made to have a baseball league during the months of May and June. Without a doubt this will prove a success and it is hoped that all the schools will enter.

No Church Games: On account of the debate between Madison and Janesville at the high school tonight, the church basketball games scheduled to be played will be postponed for one week.

CATHOLIC MISSION

DRAWS BIG CROWDS

Men of All Religious Beliefs Attend Evening Services at St. Patrick's Church.

Over twelve hundred men nightly attend the mission services held at St. Patrick's Catholic church. This evening devotion is principally given over to the sermon by the Rev. Father Ignatius Conroy, C. P., who with the Rev. Andrew Miller, both of the Pastoral Fathers order, have been in the city since a week ago Sunday. Short instructions by the Rev. Miller are followed by the sermon of the evening and this in turn followed, and the devotions closed, with benediction.

The Rev. Conroy's sermon for tonight is "The World's Greatest Tragedy." His discourses during the week have attracted more attention than those of any Catholic missionary who visited the city in the past ten or twenty years, from the city as a whole. Every one has been a masterpiece, a plea with a moral that makes strong men think.

Those who have attended the sermons throughout the week expect to hear tonight the most notable discourse of those given thus far. Rev. Conroy's instructions by the Rev. Miller are followed by the sermon of the evening and this in turn followed, and the devotions closed, with benediction.

The services commence at 7:30 o'clock.

BOARD WILL SPREAD

PAVING ASSESSMENT

Meeting of Board of Public Works Scheduled to be Held This Afternoon.

A meeting of the board of public works may be held this afternoon to spread the assessment of property affected by the resolutions passed by the council, ordering asphaltic concrete pavement on Oakland avenue and brick pavement on South Franklin street. After the assessments are spread public hearings will be held by the board, within a period of two weeks and at that time objections are heard to the assessment schedule.

The question of the brick pavement on South Franklin street resolves itself into a question of whether the council will or will not, rescind their order to pave the street with brick.

An order was passed to pave this street before the petition was received from the property owners to have it paved with macadam.

The council expect to hold a meeting later in the afternoon to transact minor municipal business.

THE GIRL AND THE GAME ...

Copyright 1915 by Frank H. Spearman.

The incident would have been closed, with the hind outfit car making rapidly towards safety, had not the wholly unexpected happened to upset Storm's plan. That very day Rhinelander's men had set in half a dozen telegraph poles and the anchor wire of one of these placed near the track, caught, as the second last car sped past, on the step. The pole swayed violently. For a moment Rhinelander's men, watching, hoped it might clear. But crashing suddenly forward, it fell between the last two cars, struck the coupling heavily and sprung the knuckle.

Helen, watching from the cab, saw what happened. She hastily applied the air and feeling they were now far enough away to be safe from the angry men, did not worry about the accident until she perceived as she brought the train to a stop that the outfit car, last in the string, had become detached from the train and was running away.

Inside this Rhinelander and Storm were working on Spike. He opened his eyes after a time and they told him he was safe, not suspecting themselves that their car was now running wild and down a long grade, to the main line. Indeed, they felt so relieved at Spike's return to consciousness that several moments passed before signs of the accident recorded themselves to Storm's experienced ear. The car was running too far and too fast and springing to the door he pulled it open to see what Helen was doing in the cab. A glance told him the story. "We're running away," he cried to Rhinelander, who joined him. Storm sprang for the side ladder.

Helen was alive to the new danger to her friends. But how to help them taxed, for an instant, her ingenuity. To chase them with the engine, as they were headed for the main line, might end in a more serious disaster than now seemed imminent. The main line passenger train was almost due at Baird and the thought of this fact was first in Helen's mind. Near where she stood was Seagrus's motor car, the one her abductors had used only a few days before. She ran to this and springing into the seat, turned over the engine, accelerated as fast as she dare, and was off in pursuit of the runaway.

She was sure she must pass Arden station before she possibly could catch the wild car and pulling the cushion from the seat beside her, scribbled hastily across it with a piece of chalk:

Runaway car from cut-off on main line. Stop passenger at Baird.

With this in her hands as she tore past Arden station, she rose to her feet, balanced herself with an effort and flung the cushion with all the force she could summon through the operator's window.

On the deck of the runaway car Storm had seized the brake. With a violent twist he brought the chain up taut and mindful of the energy needed to check the disastrous momentum they were attaining, threw his whole strength against the wheel.

He might have saved his companions and himself even then, had not the chain, weakened by rust, snapped under the tremendous strain put on it. The deck became impossible and to avoid being shot off it, Storm climbed down the swaying ladder again into the car. Alone, Storm would not have given his peril a thought. He could drop off a car step or from a cab gangway with either moving twice as fast, with entire safety to himself. But Spike, though conscious, was desperately groggy; in fact, helpless. He had proved his reckless skill more than once and unhurt could have followed Storm in any leap the railroad man dare venture. He lay now as little able to help himself as a baby.

Casting all this up in his mind, the young railroader decided there was but one man's thing for him to do and that was to stay with his companions whether all lost their lives or not.

At Arden station the astonished operator had just time to dodge Helen's flying motor car cushion as it smashed through the window. It landed on the floor. The chalk scrawl on the top caught his eye.

In the dispatchers' office the chief was sitting at his desk and a dispatcher was on his trick at the instrument. He answered Arden instantly, took the startling message, walked hurriedly over to the chief and handed it to him:

H. C. W. Runaway car from cut-off on main line. Stop passenger at Baird.—L.

The dispatcher sprang to his train sheets and back with them to the chief who dictated the only possible answer:

Roy Corhan, the California shortstop who is with the Cardinals, seemed to be showing remarkable class at San Antonio, where he is training under Miller Huggins. Huggins is quoted as saying that in his entire career he never played second to better shortstop than Corhan, and that is some compliment, for Huggins has been on several teams which had star short fielders. Incidentally Huggins has a very good opinion of his team. He says that it is the strongest team he has had in St. Louis, and that it will prove a real contender in the National league race this year. Huggins boasts of every department of his aggregation, and he can't see how any of the other teams of the old league stand a chance of beating him out.

Arthur Fletcher is the wit of the Giants. He has a quick, original answer for every question that is put to him. The other morning he was walking up from the ball park along the tracks of the I. G. & N. R. R., and Matty said to him:

"Say, Fletcher, who is the president of the I. G. & N. Railroad?"

"I don't know," said Fletcher, "but I'll find him pretty soon."

"Find him?" said Matty. "How can you, when you don't know him?"

"Well," said Fletcher, "I'm on his tracks now."

Matty was revived with difficulty.

Duke Kahanamoku, the Hawaiian aquatic sensation, will be kept busy during his stay in this country, he having arrived here this week. He will begin in the early part of April, for the itinerary arranged for him by Frederick W. Ruben, secretary-treasurer of the Amateur Athletic Union, calls for his appearance at many of the principal clubs in the United States. All of the important amateur organizations in the country have been clamoring for Kahanamoku's appearance, and it has been a difficult task arranging a schedule which would satisfy all concerned.

Just about once in a lifetime you hear of a ballplayer turning down an offer with one club to accept a job with a club in a league of lower classification and at less salary. Paddy Livingston is of those members of the present generation who has done such an act. Paddy is now getting ready to join the Sioux City club of the Western league in preference to the Indianapolis club of the American association and thereby hangs a tale. Paddy has a deep-seated sense of what's right. He was a member of the Indianapolis club in 1914, but he was shabbily treated by Owner J. C. McGill, refused to sign for 1915 and again turned down a contract at excellent terms for 1916. Result—he will play with class A club instead of a class AA club and at less salary.

Indications are that the New York Yankees (Yankees) will have a much improved team this season. With Lee Magee and Fritz Maisel both in the outfield, the indications are for a big improvement in the outfield. The outfielders of the Yankees are fast, fast beyond the ordinary. Their speed will help greatly in raking the territory for fly balls and also in getting in on the outfield. The Yankees have had few outfielders who were adept at this. A hit past one of them generally meant a triple or a home run. Maisel is swift enough to remedy this defect and Magee is another fast runner. High and Gillooley are speedy runners and there is material at hand for a decided improvement in intercepting ground hits before they yield triples or four-baggers.

Mike Dorizas, Penn's heavyweight champion and star all-around athlete, made his last appearance at the Quaker institution in the dual wrestling meet in which Cornell was defeated. In his three years of intercollegiate wrestling Mike has never been thrown and never outpointed, and he lived up to his reputation in fine style. Although still nursing an injured shoulder, Dorizas had little difficulty in throwing his opponent, Snyder, who was no match for the powerful Greek. It took Mike just one minute and fourteen seconds to pin Snyder's shoulders to the mat with a fierce bodyhold.

With the acquisition of Catcher Arthur Wilson to the Pirate catching staff, the chances of Manager Jimmy Calhoun's Buccaneers finishing up in the race next season are accordingly boosted considerably.

Fleider Jones has written his motto for the coming spring trip of the Browns. It consists of one word and means a lot. "Work" is the only motto that Jones thinks will fit the bill.

Hugh Jennings is rather severe in his rulings in the training camp at Vauxhall, Tex., this spring. His latest edict is against any player taking time during the daytime. He wants them to do all their sleeping at night, and he makes it strong, saying that those who are caught taking a snooze during business hours will be sent to the minors, regardless of who they may be. Jennings told his athletes that he wants a lot of live players who will not sleep while there are other things to do.

The alterations made at the recent meeting of the football rules committee have been summarized as follows: "The referee can call the game on account of darkness. A player can bat the ball with his hand in a forward pass. If a team comes on the field late the other side can choose the goal. A player must be the last man on line of scrimmage to get a forward pass. If a kickoff goes into the crowd it is a touchback. If a blocked kick goes into the stands, it is a safety. No one, not even a physician, can go on the field without permission. There can be no striking with fists or gloves. If a defending team's forward pass hits the goal posts, it is a safety. Players do not have to wear numbers."

Wind often blows Joe Tinker into new meadows, but wherever it wafts him, the shortstop always finds milk and honey.

Manager Lee Fohl is worrying about his pitching staff. He is satisfied with his infield and his outfield,

Edith Reeves, a lineal descendant of William Penn, reputed to have been the "greatest peace-at-any-price man of his time," has been captured by the "vicious and pretty young lady" who has just appeared in her first film play, "The Moral Fabric."

Though descended from the peace-loving founder of the "City of Brotherly Love," she prefers to mention the fighting members of her family and points with pride to William Paynter of Chamberne House, Belgrave Square, London, who was major of the king's dragon guards and earned numerous decorations for valor. He was one of the governors of Delaware in the early days of the history of that state.

WHAT'S PROPER GARB FOR ARCH VILLAIN?

What is the proper garb and what type of haberdashery should an accomplished movie villain wear in pictures? Perhaps Stuart Holmes, one of the featured "heavies," can answer this successfully. In his most recent picture, "A Wife's Sacrifice," he is as usual, the accomplished bewitcher of women and this is what he wears to good advantage:

A heavy fake or chip straw hat of black and white straw that has the mixed colorings of an ear of Indian corn. A plain shirt of heavy material in dark colors, a soft and wide necktie of dark but contrasting colors. A soft, turn-down collar fastened in front with a gold bar-pin, a loose-fitting coat with patch pockets and gathered-in back and a belt-like effect. He wears summer weight trousers with a longwise stripe, black socks with a white circular pin stripe and low canvas oxfords. As may be imagined, he carries quite a pile.

Sam Bernard says he worked 13 1/2 days in his ten-week contract and received $25,000.

"One fellow in the picture has to be a victim of an auto accident," says Bernard, "and for that day he got $3. I helped pull him out from under the machine and got $400."

Billie Burke, though taking pictures for the great new "Billie Burke serial," is in the same time machine to enjoy life pretty much at Palm Beach. In off hours she's here, there, and everywhere, now in the

and thinks he has a good catching staff, but of all the pitchers Guy Morison seems to be the only one who is rounding into form. While Mitchell is slow to show anything this spring, and Combe is said not to be improving, Collamore is a questionable league leaguer, and Hagerman, Jones, Coveleskie, Cater and Garrett are, in the opinion of Fohl, rather uncertain. He is afraid that he will have to try and make some deals for pitchers, for he does not consider his twirling staff strong enough.

When Joe Cantillon was managing the Washington club he tried out an outfielder named Kay, who hailed from the New York State league. Kay was a wonderful batsman and better than the average outfielder, but was shy on brain work. Thinking with him was a Herculean effort. As he went to bat one day with the bases full, Kay turned to Cantillon and asked, "What shall I do?" "Use your head," commanded the Washington boss. Kay did. On the next pitched ball he stuck out his head and was carried to the clubhouse. It was some head work.

Whether Jim Thorpe will retain his job with the Giants remains to be seen. So long as the opposing pitchers are not using curves the Indian is doing some very impressive hitting, but unless he can convince McGraw that he is not weak on curve pitching he will probably sit on the bench again next season, for it is understood that Thorpe has an iron clad contract which has another year to run. Of course he may master the curve ball, for there are many hitters weak on the delivery who eventually learn how to hit it because they get accustomed to seeing it.

Suddenly the face, grinning mischievously, appeared at the window Hambridge Yarrow, who had been poisoning with one shoe ready to throw for fifteen minutes, violently let fly. There was a great crash as the impact struck the chord of breaking glass, and Hambridge Yarrow rushed to the window and thrust his head out the hole.

There was nothing outside but dark night air. The pavement, thirty feet below, shone empty and glistening, for only the week before there had been a nasty shower.

'PAYS TO ADVERTISE' LAUGHING SUCCESS

Cohan & Harris Farce Presented at Myers Theatre to Huge Audience Scores Complete Success.

Everyone who has anything to do with advertising in Janesville should owe a debt of gratitude to Cohan and Harris for having demonstrated, through the drama presented at Myers Theatre last evening, that "It Pays to Advertise." The authors' take on the program is credited to Roi Cooper Murgue and Walter Hackett, but the unerring hand of George M. Cohan could be traced throughout the entire play, so full of surprises was this attraction.

All who witnessed this funny presentation of a big subject surely know now that "It Pays to Advertise," and the entire audience easily discerned the tricks of the trade as demonstrated by Ambrose Peal, a theatrical press agent, who lives and breathes advertising, a rather difficult part, but guaranteed to perfection by James J. Garner.

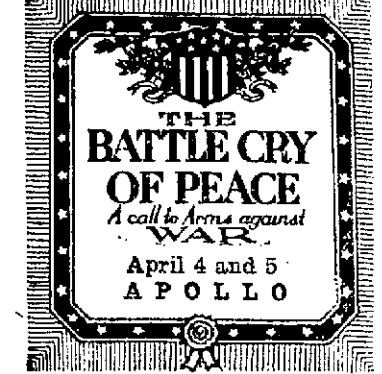

Cyrus Martin, well played by Daniel A. Anderson, a millionaire soap manufacturer, enters into a conspiracy with his secretary, Mary Grayson, charmingly portrayed by Miss Elsie Glynn, who is an up-to-date young woman, to try and arouse some energy in his son Rodney Martin, cleverly taken on by James J. Mitchell, who is inclined to be indolent and takes no interest in his father's enterprises. Mary Grayson, therefore, allows young Martin to fall in love with her, that she may better advise him and point out the advantage of a busy life. Inspired by his sentimental feelings, Rodney enthusiastically plunges into a business career, and declares he will secure a soap for the market that will compete with the trust, of which his father is the controlling figure. He stumbles upon an old book and finds a recipe for cheap soap. He is in the midst of planning ways and means when Ambrose Peal comes in looking for work. Rodney immediately engages Peal, who is bubbling over with advertising ideas, to help "fight the trust."

The campaign is fought on vigorous lines. There is a scarcity of capital, but an abundance of ideas. The young man has hit upon a popular title, and with this thoroughly advertised, the soap king is bluffed into a compromise, which finally results in the same big success, and as Colonel Mulberry Sellers used to say, "there's millions in it."

It is a fact that not often in the course of the theatrical season do players have the opportunity to laugh as uproariously as they did at this delightful farce. The fun started at the beginning of the first act and from that time until the final curtain fell it was just one hearty laugh after another.

WOMAN'S PAGE

Heart and Home PROBLEMS

—By—
MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON
Letters may be addressed to
MRS. THOMPSON
In care of the Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) Should the engagement ring be taken off during the wedding ceremony?
(2) Does the bridegroom furnish the bride's carriage?
(3) Is it necessary to wear gloves with a long-sleeved dress at a wedding with but a few relatives and friends present?

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) I do my hair parted in the middle with the hair down my back. How can I make my hair up? I can't make a pompadour, it is long and I can't get it to stay up.

(2) It is hard for me to express myself. How can I learn to do it?
(3) How can I get boys to take me places?
(4) Part your hair on the side and after you have worn it that way for awhile the part in the middle will disappear and you can pump it more easily. As first you cannot expect your hair to stay up very well, but if you keep combing it the same way persistently in time it will stay up without any trouble.

(5) Respectable girls do not flirt. (6) Keep a journal and each night write in it the experiences you have had during the day. If you write as well as you can each time you will learn to express yourself more easily. (4) Look as attractive as you can and enjoy your girl friends until some boy asks to take you somewhere. There is no other way you can "get boys" and keep their respect.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) I have a niece staying with me for whom I would like to do something. Her own folks won't keep her and she won't work. I can't hardly afford to keep her now. There is a young man boarding here who talks to her when she herself forces her attentions on him, but he never takes her out anywhere. I think by treating him kindly and doing nice things for him that I could get him to go with her? Or should I let him show his attentions first? She needs a home and I want to get her married.

(2) Do you think a man likes a homely girl?

(3) Do you think music would win a man's heart?

(4) You cannot force the man to marry your niece no matter how kind you are to him. She makes a mistake in seeking his attentions when he shows no interest of his own accord. Insist upon her getting out and working. No girl should sit around waiting for a man to marry her, because the chances are she will be left and then she will be without home and means of support.

(5) Many homely women are married. A woman makes a great mistake, however, not to cultivate good looks to the highest degree.

(6) Good music might win a man's heart if he were especially fond of music, but it takes more than music to win the hearts of most men.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl of nineteen and expect to take a trip the first of April.

(1) What kind of hat would be suitable?
(2) What kind of dresses are worn now?

(3) A dark tailored hat would not show the wear as much as one trimmed with flowers.

(4) Silk and crepe de chine dresses are worn now. If I were you I would count on wearing a skirt and pretty waists more than dresses.

SIDE TALKS

—By—
RUTH CAMERON

WHEN PUBLICITY HELPED.

Honor to whom honor is due. I always loved that phrase. It has a wonderful ring to it. And I thought of it the other day when I heard the story of a certain charity.

I was a charity for sick babies. I want tell you its name for certain reasons. It was founded on this wise. An item was published in a newspaper suggesting the work and the public immediately became so much interested that money poured in and the work began. It was a picture of charity and the newspapers always gave plenty of space to pictures and stories about the pathetic little waifs of humanity whom it served.

And the money rolled in and the charity, small at first, grew into a great and wonderful institution. Then there came a day when the original founder withdrew from the work and a new set of men took hold of it. "There has been too much publicity, too many pathetic stories," said these men. "We don't want that sort of thing. We will appeal to the public in a sensible, dignified way. We won't permit this newspaper sensationalism."

And they ran $5,000 behind. They kept to that programme for a season, and in that season they ran $5,000 behind. The next year they went back to the old way with a new respect for newspapers.

You can't reach the average man's pocket through his brain, you've got to get at it through his heart. That's the lesson these "high-brow" directors learned, and it was taught them by an agency they had rather despised—the daily newspaper.

They Withhold no secrets. A great many people, though they are themselves newspaper readers, like to cry down newspaper publicity. They are unwilling to give the newspaper reporter news which there is no reason he should not have, and they are horrified at the bare idea of having their pictures in the paper.

Now there are undoubtedly many things published in newspapers (some newspapers) which could quite as well be left out. But even in these deterring pictures in the paper, publicity must be a force for the good. Also, one should consider that the newspapers wouldn't print such matter unless people showed that they wanted to read it.

But, putting this question aside, there is no doubt that the newspapers are a tremendous force for good, and that they deserve more honor than they get from a certain class of people.

The Newspaper is Your Servitor. If you want your newspaper to be different, do your part by writing a letter of commendation to the editor when he prints the kind of paper which you approve. He wants to give the public what the public wants. Let him know what you, as part of the public, like.

And when, as in the course of human events, he undoubtedly will, a reporter has cause to call on you, give him all the news you reasonably can, and if it is a question of a picture remember that you like to see the pictures of interesting people, and if the public has a right to be interested in you, give him the picture. It won't hurt you, you know. I'm prejudiced because I used to be a newspaper reporter myself. Not only that, but I'm also prejudiced on the side of common sense and justice.

Household Hints

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

To Clean Silverware—In a tin pan place a small piece of zinc, one teaspoon of common baking soda and one teaspoon of table salt. Over this mixture pour boiling water enough to cover the silver when immersed in the water. Allow silver to remain in the solution a few minutes, then take out and wash. The silver will be as bright as new and will not show the traces of cleaning, as one sometimes sees when cleaned with silver polish.

After oiling sewing machine tie absorbent cotton above the needle; it will prevent soiling the sewing.

"DIFFERENT" WAYS TO COOK ONIONS.

Boil spring onions in slightly salted water until tender and drain. Put individual plates with cream sauce, as you would asparagus. Bake onions in oven as you would potatoes (that is, take about the same length of time). When tender, peel and serve with salt and pepper and melted butter. Stuffed Onions—Scoop the centers out of as many onions as you have persons to serve. Mix the centers with any kind of chopped cold meat. Season with salt and pepper. Moisten with gravy or cream. Fill onions and bake in covered dish about the same length of time. When ready to serve, cover tops with browned bread crumbs.

Dainty Breakfast Dish—Cut green onions in inch lengths. Simmer in butter until tender. Beat up eggs and scramble over onions.

Sweet Potatoes and Nuts—Chop two cups hot sweet potatoes, one cup nut meats, one cup melted butter, one beaten egg, one-half teaspoon salt, egg and bread crumbs. Mix two cups chopped hot sweet potatoes and one cup chopped nut meats, stir in cup of melted butter and a beaten egg. Season with one-half teaspoon salt, press into square molds; when cold, cut into slices, dip in egg and bread crumbs and fry.

Orange Salad—Three oranges, two apples, lettuce, mayonnaise. Peel and slice thin three oranges and two apples. Separate into bits and serve on lettuce with mayonnaise.

Rice Pudding With Stewed Fruit—Two cups rice pudding (cold), one cup stewed and chopped tart prunes, prune juice, sweetened and thickened with a little cornstarch. Take two cups of rice pudding that has become very stiff when cold and mix with it cup of stewed and chopped tart prunes. Pile it lightly in a glass dish and serve it with the prune juice, sweetened and thickened with a little cornstarch. Other fruits may be used. Floating Omelette—One and one-half cups milk, two teaspoons granulated sugar, two eggs, two tablespoons powdered sugar, one-quarter teaspoon salt, one-half teaspoon vanilla. Method—Scald milk; separate yolks from whites. Beat yolks until thick. Add granulated sugar and salt, then hot milk slowly. Return to double boiler and cook until it forms a coating on spoon. Beat whites until stiff. Add powdered sugar and one-fourth teaspoon vanilla.

GINGLES' JINGLES

BEING HAPPY.

Shall I tell you why I'm happy? Shall I tell you why I'm glad? There's a reason for the sunshine in my path; there's a cause behind the fact that I am never feeling sad, there's a why that I will never bow to wrath. It's because I like my fellow-men, I like them one and all, both the young and old, the rich and poor as well, I can see the good in everyone—for nothing else I fall, every thought but those of kindness I dispel. I am glad to be among them, I am glad to lend a hand—I am always glad to help a brother climb, and to scatter smiles and sunshine broadcast over all the land, ringing out to all the world a joyous chime. That's the secret of a happy life, of gladness and of joy—that's the way to make your dream of cheer come true—boosting, helping, liking others, evil thoughts you must destroy—making others happy, does the same for you. Ernest Ingle

The Doctor Calls It "Auto-intoxication"—It means self-poisoning—an ailment that is almost universal with men and women of sedentary employment. Its cause is the daily intake of indigestible foods. Mineral oils and saline laxatives will not cure it. Help Nature to clean out the poisons by eating Shredded Wheat Biscuit, a food that builds healthy tissue and keeps the bowels sweet and clean. The perfect food of health and strength for youngsters and grown-ups, for men who work with hand or brain. It is ready-cooked and ready-to-serve. Made at Niagara Falls, N. Y.

Veal Croquettes—Mix a cup of cold veal in a chopping bowl, adding a little cold ham and two slices of onion, a pinch of mace, powdered parsley and pepper, some salt. Let a pint of milk come to the boiling point, then add a tablespoon of cold butter, then the above mixture. Beat up two eggs and mix with one teaspoon of flour and add to the rest; cook it all about ten minutes, stirring with care. Remove from fire and spread it on a platter, roll it into balls. When cooled flatten each; dip them in egg and bread crumbs and fry in a wire basket dipped in hot lard. Nut Bread—Two cups graham flour, one cup white flour, one-half teaspoon salt, one-fourth cup sugar, one-half cup molasses, one teaspoon soda, one scant cup milk, one scant cup oil. Mix cups sour milk—make as stiff as soft bread. Bake about forty minutes.

Marrying for Money

—By MRS. EVA LEONARD—

Ortrude Confides in Nell Her Determination to Live a Different Life.

"Well, Mrs. Morton, I ran in to say good-bye. All my packing is done. I have just seen the last box nailed up and tagged for shipping. The house will be empty tomorrow night."

Ortrude Townsend sank wearily into the easy chair Nell drew up for her. "I am sure you are thankful that it is over," sympathized Nell. "It is a forlorn task to break up a home, and you have been soiled only a few months."

"It is only a few months, but it seems half a lifetime. When I handled the things I had selected so short a time ago—filled with such pride and with such pride."

that I was to be mistress of a well-appointed home—when I handled them I say, I wondered how many years had passed. I felt so old, so different." Ortrude leaned back wearily and closed her eyes. "A change will be good for you. With new surroundings you will soon feel like yourself again." Nell's tone was cheerful.

"I know what you think: that I have not suffered an irreparable loss as long as I cared so little for my husband." There was the old loss of the head that Nell had tried so little in their first acquaintance. "But you do not understand what I mean. I do not see how I can tolerate life with myself since I have had a good reason for my change. I am, however, amiable I am," Nell laughed, but Ortrude's face remained sober.

"I have been thinking of something you said the first time we were riding together. You said, 'Anyone who is so self-centered as to push his own plans through with no consideration for anyone else is doing himself as well as everybody else an injury.' I realize now that that is and the injury was greater than I ever dreamed."

THE YEAR-OLD BABY.

What should a baby have to eat when he is one year old? Here is a menu upon which he will thrive:

6:30 A. M.—Father creeps downstairs and gets a bottle of certified, sterilized, sweetened condensed milk, mixes some barley or oatmeal gruel with it, and feeds it to the baby.

9 A. M.—Mother feeds baby one or two ounces of orange juice.

10 A. M.—Aunt Mary mixes him up the following: Milk, two parts; meal or barley gruel, one part; patience and cherry smiles, ninety-nine parts. Aunt Mary sits down and feeds baby about ten or twelve ounces of this from a cup—under no circumstances should he have a bottle.

1 P. M.—Two ounces of beef juice; or, if white of one egg, soft-boiled or poached (whole egg after fifteen months); or four ounces of mutton broth or chicken broth.

Four to six ounces of milk and gruel again.

6 P. M.—Father rides baby on his knee to get up an appetite. Same bill of fare as for 10 A. M.

10 P. M.—Same bill of fare for 6 A. M., with this important exception: Father should NOT be disturbed—his pipe might go out, and besides he has got to get rested up for the A. M. duty which hangs over his head like an evil omen.

This goodnight meal had better not be given from the bottle. In fact a baby at twelve months should be made to take his food from a cup or spoon altogether. When you see a baby, fifteen or twenty or more months old still on the bottle you may be sure they will make trouble for their misguided parents later on.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.
The family doctor has some spasm from our little boy examined, and the report read, "Two or three tubercle bacilli to the slide." The doctor was astonished. Does that signify anything serious?

Answer—It would suggest tuberculosis. If tubercle bacilli are present in the sputum it doesn't matter whether there are few or a great many—that is the number of bacilli in no wise determines the degree of infection.

Rupture and the Safest Treatment.
My brother, aged twenty-five years, has a rupture forty years, and every little while it lays him up for a day or two. He is almost decided to have it operated on, but first wishes your opinion as to the danger involved.

Answer—It is dangerous to have a rupture. It is a daily menace to life itself. The safest, and for a man under middle age, the only sensible treatment is the radical operation for permanent cure. By all means, if he must work for his living, he should have the operation done at once.

EVERY ONE WEARING SPANISH SHAWLS NOW

The Fashionable Shawl Puts a Spanish Flavor in the Dresses Now-a-Days.
(By Margaret Mason.)

Priscilla doesn't give a rap for wraps of any sort. Yet everyone is wearing wraps. They're Fashion's strongest force. To still be chic, escape a cape. And give a saque the sack, Priscilla solved with much finesse. Also a bit of tact. Indeed, she's doubly fashionable. Yet not a wrap she bought. Her brow is mantled with a blush. And she is wrapped in thought.

New York, March 24.—Shawl! or shawl! That's the present sartorial question. The Spanish flavor in our dressing, the quaint "befo' the war" check of the hoops and crinolines have melted forth from layers of tissue paper and old lavender those graceful fringed squares that wrapped our grandmothers in cashmere and romance.

There are exquisite gossamer lace shawls, black or white, for wear with the fluffy ruffles of our summer organdies; lovely pastel tinted crepe shawls with deep silk fringe; as well as the heavily embroidered crepe shawls of Chinese origin.

Of course the exotic beauties of the brilliantly embroidered Spanish shawls are in great demand by all that crave the stunning brunettes who effect long drooping earrings and languorous glances.

Even the maid of sports has fallen for the shawl in the shape of the warm, cozy plaid of old Scotland. There is such a fad for cunning little capes that it is indeed a de-terminated and square set of feminine shoulders that can escape their lure. Taffeta seems to have been invented for these fascinating frivolities and most of the capes are ruffled. They are all ridiculously short and inconsequential and therefore coquetish. One of peach color taffeta is simply three tiers of ruffles with an other high ruffle turned up around the neck for a collar. Two tiny artificial peaches trail with a knot and long dangling ends of narrow picot edged old blue ribbon are set at the back of the collar.

Another contrasting type is a plain little fitted cape of grey taffeta, rose lined with a rich, around its shoulder length finish and a roll collar that reveals the rose lining. Then there are the quaint little silk coats and scarves of 1830. Worn with summer frocks they are irreplaceable. One of the apple green faille has flaring bell sleeves and a flaring little peplum edged all about with a quilling of ribbon.

Another little blouse like saque of bronze faille is finished in a cording and fastens at the waist line with two tiny oranges.

Longer line with voluminous skirts and long capes of taffeta for evening wear fully as full as the barrel skirt beneath them add variety to the wrap fad.

Surely with such an assortment to choose from everyone can be wrapped in her own personality.

WHY DINING CAR CHEFS PREFER KG BAKING POWDER

Those who have had cakes ruined by jarring the stove, slamming the oven door or a heavy footstep, may have wondered how the dining car chef can turn out such marvelous biscuits, not breads and pastry when his oven is being incessantly jarred and jolted and shaken by the motion of the train.

To get pastry to raise and stay raised under these conditions, a baking powder must be used that continues to give off its leavening gas—that sustains the raise—until the dough is baked through.

Dining Car Chefs have found a baking powder exactly suited to their needs in K. C. and you will find it just as well suited to your requirements. K. C. is really a blend of two baking powders, one active as soon as moistened, the other requiring both moisture and heat to start the generation of leavening gas. No matter how moist and rich you make your cake, K. C. Baking Powder will sustain the raise until a crust is formed and all danger of falling is past.

K. C. Baking Powder is pure and healthful. It is guaranteed under all pure food laws, and is guaranteed to please you. And it is sold at a reasonable price—no baking powder should sell for more.

FOODS THEY BUILD OR DESTROY

Amazing but rarely suspected truths about the things you eat.

By ALFRED W. McCANN (Copyright, 1916, by Alfred W. McCann.)

CHAPTER 32.

The evils of constipation, ignored by the false and dangerous attitude of the public, are due to the modern system of denaturing the most important natural products of the nation's food supply.

The world little suspects the gravity of constipation, or the readiness with which it submits to correction. Even the physician needs to be reminded of the serious nature of the preventable and entirely unnecessary evil.

Listen to what Drs. John H. Musser and George Morris Piersol of the University of Pennsylvania have to say to their brother physicians throughout the United States: "If you would begin to appreciate the folly of looking upon constipation as a trifling disease. Here are their words: 'The clinical symptom is more frequently encountered in the practice of medicine than constipation. The commonplace and obstinate character of the affection is perhaps responsible for the prevalence of the idea that constipation is a necessary evil rarely capable of permanent cure.'

"As a result of this false and dangerous attitude the people are prone to a symptomatic treatment of the difference, which allows them to be content with a certain degree of temporary relief, too often brought about by the easiest means at their disposal, namely, the use of purgative drugs."

"This attitude is not only erroneous, it is harmful. Constipation is but a symptomatic disorder, and any treatment to be efficient must be directed, not to the temporary removal of the symptom, but at the cause."

"The chief cause among the most frequent general causes of constipation. These consist in food which is deficient in residue (bran) by reason of which the bowels are deprived of the mechanical and chemical stimuli necessary to promote proper intestinal activity."

"A diet suitable for constipation must be one which will furnish adequate stimuli to the intestinal mucosa by means of undeposited residue and the various chemical substances elaborated during its digestion."

"Do these words of Drs. Musser and Piersol, directed in such serious manner to the medical profession, clash with the philosophy of medicine preached by the millers? To the victims of constipation who are so easily influenced by plausible assertions, I leave the answer."

"Be careful," say the millers, "on your journey, John, not to eat any white bread. If you do your teeth will fall out. Be sure somewhere to get a spoonful of bran in your grub or you will become a victim of the Philippine itch. Keep a sharp lookout for that brown, knotted, spotted, rough stuff known as whole wheat bread or you will surely perish."

In the face of this sort of attack, Calville Center, March 23.—Mrs. Wm. Worthing is convalescing from her recent illness.

Frank Casey spent last week in Janesville with her aunt.

Evelyn Fraser is quite sick with pneumonia; she has a nurse caring for her.

This vicinity was visited by the worst storm of the season Tuesday night and Wednesday. A regular old time blizzard was on with a heavy fall of snow making it hard for milkmen and pedestrians. On account of the storm there was no school at the box in Lewis' district, only two pupils were brave enough to get out.

Frank Debnar is kept quite busy these days, sawing wood and delivering cattle for the farmers.

A box social and program will be given at the Bog school house Friday night, the 24th.

A few of our young people attended a party at Gordon Alana's Tuesday night. On account of the storm some did not get home until the next day.

Draw Plans On Paper For Your Back Yard Garden

Such Indoor Gardening Will Enable You to Raise Two or Three Crops Instead of One—Encourages Children to Do Their Part.

"Plan your backyard garden on paper in advance" is the advice of the vegetable garden specialists of the United States department of agriculture. A little indoor gardening of this sort will enable you to have fresh vegetables throughout the season and will make the same ground, with little extra labor and expense, yield two or three crops instead of the single crop commonly raised in small gardens.

vegetables the different members like, and which, therefore, they personally will be interested in raising. Confine your selections to the standard well-tried sorts. Finally, and this is most important, is the conference between the garden force and the housewife as to what vegetables really are worth raising in the back yard. It will hardly pay to raise in a small space potatoes, corn, cucumbers, squashes or melons, which occupy a large area in proportion to yield, and which can be bought cheaply in nearby markets.

In general, the aim of the back-yard gardener should be to raise those vegetables which are either expensive or in which the flavor or quality depends importantly on absolute freshness. Peas and string or lima beans to be at their best, should be cooked almost immediately after they are gathered. Peas kept even for a day lose their delicate bloom and sweetness. Consequently as much space as possible should be devoted to such vegetables, and other vegetables in which freshness does not count so importantly should largely be used as fillers to keep the ground at work. Effort also should be made in a garden to have special vegetables, such as okra, of which the family is fond and which are difficult to obtain in local markets or are commonly high priced. The housewife probably will want a little bed of parsley, chives, or other herbs, not because they are expensive to buy, but because of the convenience of being able to pick a sprig just when it is needed.

Interesting the Children. The profit from gardening, however, comes not alone from the vegetables that are produced. The healthy outdoor recreation and exercise and the educational value of a garden in training children mentally, and in inculcating in them habits of order and industry must not be overlooked. Fathers and mothers will find that the preliminary planning of a garden will much to arouse the interest of the young people and encourage them to do their share in cultivating and weeding it. This will be particularly true if the owner hires a laborer to do the first heavy spading and lets the family begin its gardening not with heavy, heartening drudgery, but on a patch ready for the lighter work of making the seed bed.

Having decided what is to be planted, the indoor gardener draws lines or symbols on his outlined plan to indicate the different crops, inserting the date when each is to be planted. Where a second or third crop is to follow the same row or occupy the same ground, this may be written in red or blue, which indicates that it is to be planted when an earlier crop is over.

In laying out the plan the owner should consider the benefit of the on vegetable necessary for a serving for his family. He also should bear in mind the habits of the plants so as to allow space enough between the rows for their proper growth, for the inter-planting of later crops, and for easy cultivation. The cultivation, of course, is easiest when the rows are 1 1/2 to 2 feet apart, as this permits the use of wheel cultivators. Plants with long, a high growth and cause heavy shade naturally should not be located where they will interfere with sun-loving small plants. Perennials, such as rhubarb and asparagus, which are not cultivated, should not be grown among plants which call for tilling. The plan may be extended also to the planting of small fruits, such as currants, raspberries and grapes, and even to the location of apple or other fruit trees.

Plots for Little Folks. Where there are very small children in the family, a separate small plot should be set aside for their play gardens. If they have their own vegetable which they are free to pull up, eat them or treat as they like, they are less liable to conduct their juvenile botanical experiments in the garden which is being grown for serious purposes.

A Typical Plan for a Back-Yard Garden. The accompanying plan was made from an unusually well-arranged and successful garden that was grown in a city back yard 25x70 feet in dimensions. The plan also can be used in laying out a plot of a larger yard or, with changes in quantity planted, can be adapted to small yards or plots of other shapes.

This lot is bounded on two sides by a board fence 6 feet high, along which 14 grapevines were planted and trained. Another grapevine was so planted as to grow on the shed at the rear. On either side of the flagstone walk strawberry plants were set. Between the walk and the fence currant bushes were planted. Between the currant bushes and the row of strawberries, were grown low-growing vegetables such as beans, peppers, eggplants and the like. The area between the walks, which was about 12 feet wide, was given over to vegetables.

In this area the rows of low-growing, quick-maturing, early vegetables were planted so that at proper intervals between them later-maturing sorts could be dispersed to the benefit of the on tire growing season, while between were placed first rows of radishes and lettuce and later bush beans. The beets, later in the season, gave way to a few late cabbage plants.

was devoted to a dozen tomato plants trained to a single-stem on stakes about four feet high. These were planted about 18 inches apart in each direction which gave them ample room for maturity. It was necessary, however, that the site for tomatoes should be as sunny as practicable. In the least sunny portion of the yard early and late peas were planted together with a row of sweet peas to supply a few much prized blossoms for the table.

Before the tomatoes were planted, onion sets occupied the area and were allowed to remain until large enough for use or until it was necessary to thin them in certain areas to make space for planting the tomatoes. A few parsley plants were placed in a convenient corner where they did not receive too much sunlight but where the environment was as cool as possible and sufficiently moist to keep the plants growing. In the autumn it was found wise to plant spinach, kale and potato-onion sets in order that a supply of green succulents might be had during the winter and early spring.

The plan once made out should, of course, be followed carefully through-out the season, especially with regard to the dates for planting. Where it is necessary to change a date this should be indicated on the plan. The plan also will serve as a convenient memorandum sheet for keeping a fairly complete record of the garden. On it can be entered notes regarding success or failure of the different vegetables, and whether too much or too little of any variety was planted for the family needs. Failures with certain vegetables or seed, especially where the plants showed any sign of root diseases, should be noted carefully and if possible the reasons for failure indicated. When the season is over this plan should be filed until the next period for indoor gardening comes around. The wise gardener will study the old plan carefully and rearrange his vegetables so as not to grow the same kind the second year in the same part of the garden. He also should be particularly careful to transfer to other parts of the garden, or not to transfer, to rise at all, those vegetables which have suffered from root-knot or similar diseases. If his notes are at all complete, they will help him to look up subjects in advance in bulletins, and also will show him what vegetables are most worth while and what hardly pay for the time and trouble spent on them.

WHITEHEAD APPOINTS COMMITTEE TO URGE TAFT PEACE CAUSE

Active Measures Will Be Taken to Secure Indorsement of Plan in Platform of Political Parties.

Hon. John M. Whitehead, of this city, former state senator, has named a committee of men to push the international peace movement in the southern part of the state of Wisconsin. Following are the men he named and including himself, they will co-operate with the other Wisconsin committee: A. F. Frame, Waukesha; John Sandow, Madison, and Fred Rogers of Milwaukee. This group has not met as yet, but it is expected that they will make plans in the near future and make their plans.

The League to Enforce Peace, of which ex-President Taft is head, has started a movement to have the platform in the coming national conventions at St. Louis and Chicago insert planks in their platforms endorsing the proposal that a league of nations be formed for the purpose of preventing future world peace, by the establishment of international tribunals to which international disputes can be referred, such nations to pledge that they will not go to war without the consent of a majority of the nations or begins hostilities prior to a recourse to such tribunals.

The League to Enforce Peace is not an anti-preparedness organization, nor is its aim to end the present European war.

For the purpose of gaining recognition at St. Louis and Chicago, the League has begun an active campaign in each state to have introduced in local party platforms the following uniform plank prepared by the League's National Executive committee:

We endorse the proposal that a league of nations be formed for joint action under such regulations as such league shall adopt, against any nation which attempts to make war without prior recourse to such world tribunals and methods of conciliation as such league of nations shall have duly approved.

The national executive committee has sent instructions to its officers and representatives everywhere throughout the country, requesting them to acquaint delegates to the state and national conventions of all parties, what it is proposed to do, urging upon them the adoption of the plank in local party platforms.

The Taft League's membership comprises many well known leaders in political circles. Among them are Ex-Gov. David R. Francis, of Madison, just appointed Ambassador to Russia, former Ambassador to France Myron T. Herrick, Gov. Samuel W. McCall of Massachusetts, Gov. Arthur Capper of Kansas, Senator Albert B. Cummins of Iowa, James M. Beck of New York, Alexander Graham Bell, Judge George Gray of Delaware, ex-Senator Theodore Burton of Ohio, ex-Gov. John Franklin Fort of New Jersey, ex-Ambassador to Mexico Henry Lane Wilson of Indianapolis, A. Lawrence Lowell, president of Harvard university, and ex-Secretary of State Richard Olney.

Among those in Wisconsin who are expected to co-operate are: Hon. Emanuel L. Philipp, Gen. Joseph B. Lee, President Charles R. Van Hise, Thomas C. Richmond, Hon. John M. Whitehead, Hon. Wm. D. Hoard, President Samuel Plantz, Prof. A. H. Over and Prof. Edward Emerson Barnard.

The platform of the Taft League, in full, as adopted last June at Philadelphia in Independence Hall, is:

We believe it to be desirable for the United States to join League of Nations binding the signatories to the following:

First: All justiciable questions arising between the signatory powers, or settled by arbitration, shall, subject to the limitation of the time, be submitted to a judicial tribunal for hearing and judgment, both upon the merits and upon any issue as to its jurisdiction of the question.

Second: All other questions arising between the signatories and not settled by negotiation, shall be submitted to a council of conciliation for hearing, consideration and recommendation.

Third: The signatory powers shall jointly use forthwith both their economic and military forces against any one of their number who goes to war, or commits acts of hostile aggression, or another of the signatories before any question arising shall be submitted as provided in the foregoing.

No provision is made for the enforcement of the decree, however, under the plan nations may fight after arbitration, if they feel that justice demands it.

Conferences between the signatory powers shall be held from time to time to formulate and codify rules of international law, which, upon some signatory shall signify its dissent within a stated period, shall thereafter govern in the decisions of the judicial tribunal mentioned in Article One.

State branches of the league have either been formed or are in process of formation in every state of the Union.

LOSES $2 A MONTH JOB; TRIES SUICIDE

William Long of Brownstown Attempts to Cut His Throat With Razor in a Fit of Despondency.

Monroe, Wis., March 24.—William Long, for a number of years official mail carrier between the depot and Brownstown, made a desperate attempt at suicide by cutting his throat with a razor. Long is long in stature as well as name, being a man of about six feet and four inches in height. He first attempted the rash act by going to the basement of his home with the intent to end his life by hanging, but was unable to find a beam high enough. Despondency over the fact that he had recently lost his position as mail carrier, which paid him only two dollars a month, is said to have been the cause of the act. The fact that he started to slash his neck from the back is said to have saved his life. When the razor encountered one of the strong cords near the jugular vein it passed safely over this vital spot, although a severe gash resulted to the front. He was taken to this city and arraigned before Judge Becker and a test of his sanity made. It was decided he was in need of treatment and he was sentenced to the state institution at Mendota.

The program was so well taken that we would be glad to mention them all, but space forbids. The opera house was crowded to its capacity and the money earned will be used through the different grades. Edgerton citizens can congratulate themselves on the efficiency of their corps of teachers.

Avalon

Avalon, March 24.—About thirty of the parents availed themselves of the opportunity to visit school last Friday, it being parents' day. They spent a very pleasant as well as profitable afternoon in visiting the children in their everyday work. To some it was really a rare treat to see the new methods used in teaching now and fifteen years ago. There should be more such times and parents should visit the school oftener and less fault would be found with the teacher if her methods were more fully understood and parents and teachers were more in touch with one another. At the close of the afternoon the teacher and pupils served the company with salad, punch and wafers.

INTER-CLASS TRACK MEET STAGED AT MILTON COLLEGE

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)

Milton, March 24.—The team known as "Fussers" captained by Kenneth B. Randolph, won first place in the first annual all-college indoor track and field meet Monday evening at the college gym. This meet was conducted on the point system, whereby nearly every man in the college took part in three events out of twelve in three classes; and no team was allowed more than three men in any one event.

Thus every man had a chance to score, and individual stardom was largely eliminated. Scores of the teams: Freshmen, 1190; Bonheads, 1134; Roughnecks, 1092; Scrubs, 1972.

Scores computed by classes, dividing each by the number of men in each class: Sophomores, 352; seniors, 145.9; academy, 135.8; freshmen, 132.2; juniors, 82.7. Dividing by the number of men in each team: Seniors, 164.2; sophomores, 152; freshmen, 146.2; academy, 135.8; juniors, 123.5.

Lush scored the most points, Randolph second, Shaw third, Warner, West, Green, Talbot and others also deserve mention for high scores. The time made was slow throughout the meet, on account of the nature of the meet and the lack of training of the contestants.

JANESVILLE, WIS

THE GOLDEN EAGLE

LARGEST ASS

Are You in Business for Yourself?

A Painter, a Carpenter, a Baker, a Rug Weaver, a Paper Hanger, a Mason, a Cement Worker, a Builder of Concrete Blocks, an Excavator, a Chimney Sweep, a Milk Dealer, a Blacksmith, a Tinner, a Jack-of-all-trades, a Tinkerer, a Cabinet Maker, an Electrician, a Plumber, a Harness Maker, a Drayman, a Taxi Driver, a Horse Dealer, a Dressmaker, a Teacher or a Doctor.

It is to your advantage to keep your name before the public. It is the life of your trade for the public to know that you are "still in business at the same old stand."

Every man or woman with a small business, every man or woman who derives his or her livelihood from the patronage of the public, every man or woman who uses no other newspaper publicity in the promotion of their business, should have an ad either under a classified head or in the "Business Directory" on the widely read classified ad page of The Gazette.

It will be wonderfully surprising to you to learn how inexpensive this class of advertising is, and what remarkable results you get for so small an expenditure.

The people of today do not ask this person and that person who plows gardens, or who does paper hanging or cleans out cisterns. They search through the advertising columns of their daily newspaper, and if your ad is there you are the one who will profit. The daily paper is their guide, their directory, their book of reference.

Many will say, "I couldn't stand the expense of advertising" and let it go at that, not appreciating the fact that it would be an investment rather than expense, as necessary to carry on business as tools, or stock or counters. And they will go on having to be satisfied with what business they can derive from their circle of friends and acquaintances, while those who do "see the light" will prosper from the patronage of the whole community—all Janesville and the many towns surrounding, where The Gazette circulates more than 7,600 papers daily.

It is estimated that the classified page of The Gazette with its "Business Directory" and sixty or more other classifications is read daily by more than 35,000 people—an army greater than twice the population of Janesville—an army who will give you patronage sooner or later.

In justice to your business, in justice to the public, who seek you, and even in justice to those who are already your patrons, your Ad should be there—a handy reference, a convenience, a guide for those who want you.

You cannot help but profit thereby. The value of the classified ads has been tried and found not lacking for promotion of the small business, which will eventually join the ranks of the big businesses if properly promoted.

We are banking our argument on the statements of those who have used and are using the classified and the "Business Directory," and have been so elated over the results that they have taken special pains to tell us about it time and again.

We invite you to join the army of the successful, the army of classified ad users, at a cost so low that you will hardly believe it to be true.
